PENOBSCOT COUNTY FARMERS CLUB

An Unusually Interesting and Profitable Discussion of "Fruit Raising in Maine"—A Carefully Prepared and Valuable Paper by Prof C. H. Fernald on the Insect Enemies of the Orchardist

The regular meeting of the Penobscot County Farmers Club held on Saturday March ... was called to order by President ...

LETTER FROM W. H. MILLS

... Very respectfully W. H. MILLS

TREATMENT OF THE TREES

INSECT ENEMIES OF FRUIT TREES

Prof C. H. Fernald of the State College read the following interesting and valuable paper on the insects which infest the trees ...

THE TENT CATERPILLAR ...

In all the cases where I have raised tent caterpillars in confinement, they have taken two meals a day, one about the middle of the forenoon, provided the weather was clear and moderate, and one near the middle of the afternoon. Some, however, have stated that they take a third meal in the night, but I have never seen this. From the observations of others and my own experiments, I am led to conclude that each caterpillar will consume, on an average, about two apple leaves a day, and as each nest contains about three hundred caterpillars, there would be about six hundred leaves destroyed each day, a drain which no tree can sustain for any considerable length of time without great injury. After the caterpillars have attained their full growth they lose their social habits and wander off to find retreats where they may form their cocoons, which are oval, white or pale yellow, and attached horizontally to the under side of fence rails or other protected places. They usually remain in these cocoons about three weeks, after which they come out, the sexes pair, and the females lay the eggs upon the twigs of the trees, and the work of that generation is done, and the moths very soon die.

Remedies.—There are three measures which I can confidently recommend, whereby these insects may be held in check and the trees saved from ruin:

1. Burn all the cocoons which may be found

2. Search the trees carefully during the season when they are bare—or in the spring and fall—for the clusters of eggs, and when found, cut them off and burn them. Do not be satisfied with anything short of burning

3. As soon as any tents are observed in the orchard, they should be destroyed ...

THE PLUM CURCULIO ...

Remedies. It is recommended to spread a large sheet of white cloth under the tree, and give it a sudden jar, as striking it upon the end of a limb which has been sawn off; the curculio will fall upon the sheet and may be collected and destroyed. Morning and evening are the best times to jar the trees. An additional recommendation is to spread small pieces of boards about under the trees for the beetles to hide under during the day, and by turning these over they may be found and destroyed. It has occurred to me that since the larva has to work its way into the ground to undergo its transformations, where the ground is clear it might be rolled and otherwise compacted so that the curculio could not readily work itself down, and thus it might perish upon the ground from exposure to the sun.

SETTING FRUIT TREES

The following paper on setting fruit trees was read by Mr Rigby:

Fruit is a luxury that may be enjoyed almost without money or price by every family in this county. There is, perhaps, nothing which is capable of contributing more to the convenience and enjoyment of a home, than a well regulated and healthy orchard. Fruit is both a luxury and essential to good living and to good health. But it is useless to attempt to raise an orchard unless we give the trees that care and attention which is necessary to produce a crop.

There has been so much said and written upon the manner of setting trees that one, who has not given the subject much thought is at a loss how to set and be successful. The soil for fruit trees should be either naturally dry or made so by drainage ...

DISCUSSION

THE NEXT MEETING

THE LATEST MANIFESTATIONS

... the Philadelphia ghost ... and Mr DALE OWEN published his melancholy confession ...

When the excitement was at its height on a recent occasion, the mediums called for lights. Then they addressed their audience and asked if the phenomena were satisfactory and convincing. There was a unanimous response in the affirmative, whereupon these wicked mediums, one of whom was Mr. Reddalls, announced that all that had been done was pure trickery, that they were earnest enemies of the humbuggery of Spiritualism, and that they had adopted this device to concentrate public attention upon themselves, so that they might more effectually explode the fraud. It is to be hoped that in the consternation and disappointment that followed a reaction set in that will restore the better class of those interested in spiritual phenomena to the domain of common sense. As for the fools—no amount of exposing will cure them.

CONNECTICUT AND MICHIGAN.

The returns from Connecticut show that our fears for the result of the election held in that State Monday have been more than realized. The Democrats have succeeded in maintaining their control of the State, electing Ingersoll Governor by an increased majority, and a majority in both branches of the Legislature; although the Republicans have gained both in the House and Senate since last year. The most unfortunate phase of the election, however, is the defeat of three Republican candidates for Congress, giving the Democrats three of the four members of the delegation. The defeat of Gen. Hawley in the First district will be keenly regretted by all who value intelligence, patriotism and manliness in a public representative, for he was one of the most useful and influential members of the last House. His successful Democratic competitor, George M. Landers, of New Britain, is not widely known, and will be likely to prove a poor substitute for Joe Hawley. The latter ran handsomely ahead of his ticket in nearly every town in the district, while Landers fell behind Ingersoll's vote in most localities. In the Second district, Hon. S. W. Kellogg, an efficient Republican member, is defeated by Judge James Phelps, of Essex, a Liberal, who ran for Congress while holding a seat upon the bench; in the Third district, Hon. H. H. Starkweather, Republican, is re-elected; but in the Fourth William H. Barnum, Democrat, is again chosen, defeating Robert Hubbard, Republican. One of the significant features of the election is the fact that Barnum, who was a "salary-grabber," notoriously inefficient in Congress, and last heard from as the member who gave his casting vote in committee in favor of the Texas Pacific subsidy scheme, received the heaviest majority of either of the candidates. His great wealth seems to have constituted his availability, and to have secured his success. Votes were cast in all the districts for Prohibition candidates, to the detriment of the Republican tickets, but the returns are not yet sufficiently full to afford estimates of the influence of the third party movement upon the result.

The bad condition of the roads in the rural districts of the State proved of serious damage to the Republican vote, and this fact is emphasized by the evidence that the Democratic gains were largely made up in the principal cities. So far as National issues were concerned, the canvass was made between the toughest kind of Bourbonism on the one hand and Republican principles on the other. The Democratic leader of the forces was Senator Eaton, who recently distinguished himself by reviving the doctrines of Calhoun, and the rebel-sympathizers of the country hail the result as a victory of their own. There can be no doubt that the "third-term" scare had much to do with the voting, and we regard it as largely responsible for our reverses in Connecticut, as it was for those in the elections last fall. A great many people have persuaded themselves or have been persuaded that the President is seeking a third nomination, and the popular repugnance to the idea of departing from our traditions and precedents in this respect has undoubtedly influenced a large aggregate number of votes.

It is pleasing to turn from the Connecticut despatches to those which announce an overwhelming Republican victory in Michigan on the same day. Gen. B. F. Graves is re-elected Justice of the Supreme Court on both tickets, while Mr. Marston, who heads the straight Republican ticket, is credited with at least fifteen thousand majority for Supreme Court Justice, and the rest of the ticket is but little behind. At the State election in 1874, the Republican plurality for Gov. Bagley was but 5,969, while the actual majority was but 2,032, showing our friends have made immense gains throughout the State this year. In 1870 we carried Michigan on the Governor vote by 16,625 majority, expanding it in 1872 to 57,088, and the falling off to less than 6,000 in 1874 was due to the combined efforts of all sorts of parties to break down the Republicanism of the State. The "Reform" movements and "tidal-waves" have had their day, and the rolling up of an old-fashioned Republican majority in Michigan shows that the people cannot long be deceived.

The dignified and statesmanlike address of Hon. J. G. Blaine, an abstract of which is given in another column to-day, will command the attention and approval of every sincere believer in the righteousness of the principles for which our soldiers fought against rebellion and disunion. He presents the issues now before the country in a calm, conciliatory and candid manner, and draws the line between parties just where it must be placed by every thoughtful man. As he says, the re-opening of old issues is the work of our opponents, and the people cannot ignore the boldness with which the worst doctrines of the Buchanan days are proclaimed by the exponents of modern Democracy.

The election in Rhode Island occurs to-day, and is for State officers and Legislature—the Congressional elections having been changed to November. Things there are in a somewhat mixed condition. For various reasons, and particularly on temperance grounds, the regular nominations for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor created considerable dissatisfaction in the party, and a Prohibitory Convention put in nomination Messrs. Howard and Van Zandt, the present Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. They declined; and then a convention of dissatisfied Republicans nominated Rowland Hazard for Governor and Daniel E. Day for Lieutenant-Governor—both, it is understood, being acceptable to the temperance men. There will be no Republican contest over the other candidates regularly nominated on the State ticket. Very little indication of the result is yet afforded by the canvass, but it is probable that Gen. Lippitt, the regularly nominated Republican candidate for Governor, will be chosen, though by a diminished vote. The Democrats have a ticket in the field, but they have little hope of accomplishing anything.

REDPATH AND THE SCANDAL. A Boston despatch says:

James Redpath, who is now at home again, has been summoned as a witness by Theodore Tilton at the instance of Francis D. Moulton, and his examination is not likely to be brief. The conversation between him and Mr. Beecher last summer at the White Mountains and between him and Mr. Moulton will be the main subjects of the testimony. Mr. Redpath, whose friendship for Mr. Moulton has been of longer standing and of more intimate nature than his acquaintance with either Mr. Beecher or Mr. Tilton, endeavored to induce him to withdraw from the case on the ground that it could only injure him to remain in alliance with Mr. Tilton.

NATIONAL POLITICS.

THE VIEWS OF EX-SPEAKER BLAINE.

The following is an abstract of the remarks of Hon. J. G. Blaine upon national politics, delivered at New Haven on Friday evening April 2d:

Alluding to the fact that Democratic papers were finding fault because the republicans in the northern States persisted in discussing the issues which grew out of the war and still remained unsettled, when at the same time it was undeniable that the democratic party in the southern States in every county and township were discussing these same issues from precisely the opposite point of view. For the republicans to abandon these issues which involve the questions of citizenship, of free suffrage and the supremacy of the Constitution with its amendments, would be to surrender and disband their organization before the legitimate end of the struggle had been fully attained. If he was pointed to expressions of democratic acquiescence in these results, he must receive them with caution, because the condition of the South did not correspond to these assurances of acquiescence. In this remark he was not specially referring to personal outrages, elegantly termed "bloody shirt" issue by the democracy, but to that general condition of inequality and oppression under the law which prevailed in so many of the southern States.

Nor had he confidence in the efforts or intention of the democratic party to pacify and harmonize order. Look at the course of the democratic members of the House of representatives in the settlement of the Louisiana question! The final recommendation of the Louisiana committee—and it was certainly a very able committee, not rash or partisan or prejudiced—was to do two things, viz., correct the errors of the republican canvassing board and give the legislature in its popular branch to the democrats. 2d, to recognize Governor Kellogg as the de facto executive of the State, as President Grant had wisely and necessarily done. This seemed to be not only a fair adjustment but it was really the only adjustment practicable; any other would have involved wrong on the one hand or anarchy on the other. And yet every democrat in the house, save only Mr. Stephens of Georgia, voted against permitting the subject to be even introduced, voted against allowing the committee to report the adjustment, voted against even giving Congress an opportunity to bring peace to that distracted State, voted to invite a repetition of the audacious revolution of September 14, voted that discord might hold high carnival in that riot-ridden State if only thereby the prospect of a democratic victory could be enhanced. And if today law and order have supremacy in Louisiana, if today revolution and anarchy are kept out, we owe the result wholly to the fact that the republicans were enabled to outvote the democrats in the House of representatives.

Mr. Blaine said he had never sought to play the part of the alarmist, and had no taste or desire to appear sensational. But he ventured to say to the people of Connecticut that it was a safe thing for this country not to put the democratic party in the way of obtaining control of the national government. Such a result would be the beginning of a policy of reaction of which no man could see the end—a policy so violent that under the impetus acquired from victory and the confidence growing out of power it would run probably to the wildness of counter-revolution, overturning or setting aside, or at least unsettling, many of the now accepted and most important points of public policy.

The aim of the democratic party now is to consolidate the South, and then secure as much northern support as may be possibly obtained. And it is a most startling fact that, with the electoral votes of the former slave States, they need but a fraction of the northern vote to give them the government. Look at the figures! With Colorado admitted the total electoral vote will be 369—of which 185 constitute a majority. The southern States united can give 138 votes, leaving only 47 to be obtained out of the 231 that belong to the North. The three States of New York, Connecticut and California can give these 47 votes, and your own prosperous State is one that is found on the list of those who wish to control the government in this combination. And if this design could succeed it would only be history repeating itself. Against an overwhelming majority of the free States in 1856, a small fraction of them united with the South, and were enabled to fasten the Buchanan dynasty upon the country, with all the unnumbered evils that followed. Are you in Connecticut,—I speak to you not as republicans and not as democrats,—but are you as Connecticut men ready and willing to have the political strength of your State used in an unholy alliance by which the government is to be taken from the men who fought for the Union, and handed over to the control of those who fought to destroy the Union? For to this complexion will the impending issue come.

Mr. Blaine said he reposed no faith in any special form of additional coercive legislation by Congress, nor would he advise or consent to any interference with existing State government except under the express terms of the Constitution and under an exigency so pressing as to involve the public safety. What is wanted is not more law, but a better public opinion, and the only way to bring that about is for the northern States to hold the political power of the country tenaciously and unwaveringly in the hands of those who held the country together in its hour of extremest peril. It is the belief of the South that a small section of the North can be detached, and this tends continually to consolidate the South on the issue of caste and color. Let northern firmness be as conspicuous and as enduring in peace as it was in war, and the South will weary of the contest and divide on other issues. I make this appeal to the North, said Mr. Blaine, not from unkindness or prejudice toward the South. God knows I have neither toward that people. I would do all in my power to restore kindly feeling, to recall prosperity, to build up her waste places, and to make every acre from the Potomac to the Rio Grande fertile and productive and profitable. I would have every man in the North feel that the Union was formed, as the Constitution declares, "to establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity;" and I would have every voter realize that it is impossible to exaggerate the extent and importance of his responsibility. When the name and authority of the Union shall be everywhere respected; when the majesty of the law is everywhere recognized; when freedom of speech is nowhere denied, when Wendell Phillips and Oliver P. Morton can speak as freely in Georgia as Gordon and Lamar can in New Hampshire, and when every man entitled to suffrage shall be freely accorded the privilege of voting, the necessity for further appeals to the loyalty of the nation will have passed away.

The great mass of the people in this country of all parties desire peace, cordiality and kind feeling between the North and the South, and all wise statesmanship should look to that end. The democratic leaders, anxious to prove the reconstruction policy of the republicans a failure, have not lent their aid to bring about harmony, but on the contrary the southern leaders of that party have sullenly refused their cooperation, and the northern leaders with ill-concealed delight have really made this refusal the basis of an arraignment and denunciation of the republican policy. It is today the evident interest and desire of the republican party to have peace—and it is quite certain that the democrats think that disorder leads to their advantage. Moreover, the peace which the republicans desire is based on right and justice and patriotism, and will necessarily be permanent, while the policy of the democrats is one of reaction, if not of revolution, leading inevitably to fresh troubles, of which no man can see the end. Can the people of Connecticut, can the people of the nation hesitate between the issues thus presented?

THE ECLIPSE ON TUESDAY.—Much scientific interest attaches to the total eclipse of the sun which took place yesterday, 6th inst. It was not visible in this country, but was observable in the southern parts of Asia and Africa. The eclipse began near Natal, in Africa; the central line crossing the Indian Ocean south of Madagascar, north of Sumatra and near Formosa. The path of the totality was principally over the sea, but luckily for science it crossed the territory of the most enlightened of the monarchs of Continental Asia—the King of Siam—whose kingdom was totally eclipsed 3 minutes and 59 seconds. That potentate, through his private secretary, Bhashakarawongse, (of interest in these days of spelling matches) invited the Royal Astronomical Society of London to send an expedition to Siam to take observations during the eclipse, and offered every facility in his power to further the purposes of the astronomers. The society accepted, and Germany, France and Italy, also, joined in sending out expeditions. It is hoped that with favorable weather the eclipse has furnished to these parties observations which will serve as data for resolving the most important questions in relation to the constitution of the sun.

"YE OLDEN TIME."

ANCIENT COURT RECORDS IN YORK COUNTY.

The following extracts from the "History of Wells and Kennebunk," by the late Edward Bourne, just published, give an interesting reminder of the habits and customs of the olden time.

The first court held in the State was at Saco, 1647. Expenses of the term £1 10s.; of which 6s. 10d. was charged and allowed as given to the children in the house.

Grand Jury presented:—Anthony Emery, for being outgone with drink.

Presented—Goody Mendam, for saying she looked at Mr. Godfrey as a dissembling man.

Presented—James Andrews, for a makebayte and abusing Goody Mendam.

Presented—Robert Henshaw, for lying.

Each juror was allowed two meals a day and one shilling for each trial exceeding £10.

Jane Andrews was fined ten shillings "for saying that she wished the earth might open and swallow her up if she had those goods—after proved upon her."

John Roadman, "for saying he belonged to the Devil, and if the Devil had his due, he had had him seven years ago."

George Farland was ordered to have thirty-nine lashes for visiting the Widow Hitchcock.

Sarah Morgan was convicted of striking her husband, and ordered to stand with a gag in her mouth at public town meeting.

Quite a stretch of prerogative is the following: Several persons were ordered henceforth to live friendly and in perfect union. If by any act, word or deed they should do otherwise, whether men or women, they should forfeit £20 to our Sovereign Lord the King. Such power would be of immense benefit now to any community.

Temperance. In 1692 the people held rum sellers as the authors of much public suffering. Jane Littlefield had been engaged in this nefarious traffic. While the people needed every dollar for the support of themselves and families, this woman had been taking the money from them, and getting people drunk. They commenced a prosecution of the seller and drinker by putting both into the stocks.

John Wheelwright and Joseph Storer were the leading and controlling spirits of the town, and were licensed as retailers, and this same year were indicted for "keeping keeles and bowls at their houses contrary to law."

Modern squeamishness in this respect had not yet become an element of social life. An offender maintaining a high rank in society could do much more by his delinquencies than one who had not made himself influential by his intellectual, moral or adventitious power.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Somebody was mean enough in Connecticut to forge Fred. Douglass's name at the end of a circular advising colored men not to vote for the Republican candidate.

The New York World pronounces Mr. Blaine's New Haven speech very weak, but then the same paper thought Andrew Johnson's speech very strong.

The Democratic organs of the South are divided upon the question whether it is better to have a straight Democratic Presidential ticket, or to make the contest on a platform and with a ticket that shall combine all of the elements of opposition to the Administration.

Notwithstanding the recent New York Constitutional amendment forbidding the appropriation of State funds to aid private and sectarian institutions the Utica Herald says the Tammany men in the Legislature have succeeded in temporarily defeating the Supply bill because the Assembly would not agree to throw a sop of $50,000 to a Catholic orphan asylum in New York.

The gentle Raphael Semmes, whom his secession associates even consider one of the most persistent office seekers and unmitigated bores in the whole South, is out in a letter partaking largely of whine and hifalutin, denouncing the Democratic Governor and Legislature of Alabama for consenting to attend the "Radical Love Feast" known as the Centennial. It concludes "No man of honor, in my judgment, can consent to such humiliation."

In connection with the above we would merely add, that in design and finish, it is unsurpassed. It has an unusually large Oven, and extra deep Fires. The Covers and Centers are heavy, so preventing any warping. The Broiling Door is one of the most important features in modern stoves, and is so arranged in THE CLARION that broiling can be carried on successfully without any odor coming into the room. The Illuminated Fire Box presents a cheerful appearance, and shows at all times the condition of the fire without opening the door. The Skeleton Slide in Hot Closet bottom keeps any dish enveloped with warm air. The Sifter is vibrated by a handle through the front plate, and allows no dust to escape.
This Range has been thoroughly tested in every particular, and every disinterested person, and dealers will admit it to be the best Cooking Range ever offered to the public. Please call and examine it and we can give you testimonials and references that will be satisfactory to you.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

THE CONNECTICUT ELECTION

Comments of the New York Papers

NEW YORK April 7 Of the result of the election in Connecticut the Times says the significant thing in connection with the election is the emphatic answer of the Democracy to the attempt to elect a democratic majority in the next Congress The result shows that the people want peace and are determined to have it Gov Hawley has fallen in the general satisfaction, though no more able or competent opponent could be found of the measures which have received condemnation

The Sun says The Connecticut Democracy may well regard this triumph as glorious Such a victory is the real cause of the people of that State to the infamous record of Grant's administration and of the carpet-bag administration of Governor Ingersoll

The Herald says the result of the Connecticut election gives the Democratic party reason for encouragement It is idle to disguise the fact that the Republicans have a little worse than a defeat The Republicans of New Hampshire made their fight practically on a national administration and of that fight and they won by a small majority Let up the cowards among the Republican leaders will at last be able to see that the opening of such facts, and the exposure of the most inveterate machine that any party ever erected in getting into power of the evils once and for all, is the independent voter Connecticut has only followed in the footsteps of other States in America in politics which has cycled by reason to oppose and defeat the party in power to deplore his success The defeat of Hollegge for Congress will provoke no regret, but the defeat of General Hawley will be regarded with quite different lines He is a capable man, an honest man, and a good speaker and has served his State creditably in Congress Had he will have to do better than he has yet by action to excuse his existence

The World says All the Connecticut returns of the gains of the election in every district from those reported last year and Mr Wilson's for the presidential election of 1872 when Democrats were all for once in the field in force, and the result upon which to-day was congratulations to the Democrats of every other State in the Union and all the faithful Democracy of Connecticut It concludes with the following significant and hard party remarks

The Democrats of Connecticut did not yesterday think it to be up the Jefferson advice to confine not to chase the end of his extent over the late promotion of Governor Hoyt for to cast as much as the plan that refuses from the ranks of duty and fling upon the tilted party politics with the flaring Post the Tribune the Herald and the Times truly that confidence of the people that power has been laboring to bring back which had been with so many

NEW YORK CITY

The Arrest of Charles A. Dana.

Letters.

NEW YORK, April 6 Washington despatches state that the Grand Jury of the District of Columbia has dismissed all the proceedings against Charles A. Dana, of the Sun. After this action the District Attorney, without consulting the jury, took a blank form of subpœna from the Clerk's office, filled it, and sent it to the Marshal in New York. The whole affair is simply an attempt to get Dana within the jurisdiction of the Court, in order to serve a warrant of arrest for libel.

THE TILTON-BEECHER CASE.

Another Jam at the Court.

BROOKLYN, April 6 To-day again there was a great jam in the Brooklyn court-gallery The doors were thrown open to ticket holders at 9 A M, and when the first comers had filled the seats little short of overcrowding no more were admitted. Beecher's family and friends were also very early in court, and numerous letter ten ladies, chiefly of the Plymouth congregation. Additional police were stationed among the audience to prevent demonstrations. Rev Dr Henry M Dexter, who took a prominent part in the Ecclesiastical Council, was seated near Beecher's counsel The audience was very quiet and most admirable order was preserved The principal actors were slow in arriving, neither Beecher Tilton Moulton or any of the plaintiff's counsel had arrived at 11 o'clock A few minutes after 11 o'clock Beecher came in quickly walked through the court yards much as he does when entering the lecture room at Friday night prayer-meeting and taking his place in the witness stand commenced to study his memorandum book He carried a small yellow bound book He carried a small yellow bound book in his left hand Tilton soon followed Tilton came in at 11 before any of the counsel into court

After the other admissions from the court to the gallery to preserve order, Mr Evarts said I wish to correct a mistake in the report which makes him ascribe some of the applause to his friend Tilton, whereas he did not justly said Fullerton

His Judge said counsel's remarks were happily expressed, and the only thing that observed wanting in them was an expression of regret

Mr Evarts said he didn't feel so much cut over the thing, which he simply said he was that the applause was so clamorous

Mr Fullerton—Yes, and the judge expected admonitions

Judge—Something in the nature of strenuous explosion [Laughter]

Evarts—Just so, your Honor

The Judge at this point suggested reference to the case of the Secretary H M Cleveland whose evidence caused anxiety to the House on evening. It was suggested by counsel that the presence of a judge was not necessary and the witness left out

Mr Beecher Continues

At 11 20 A M the direct examination of Mr Beecher by Evarts began How was it, whether, when Mrs Tilton reported to him in June as to a reported conversation between you and Mrs Tilton at this interview you only manifested displeasure at the matter but also got into a memorandum of his congregation He answered I consulted George A Bell a near neighbor and intimate friend one of my chief counsellors and superintendent of the Bethel I stated the facts and inquire I what could better be done in regard to Mr Tilton, and I suggested that it was a case for the action of the officers of the church He said candidly he differed from me but the duty was a case for silence and I was to be

Paying the Mortgage on Tilton's House and Bessie Turner's School Bills

Among the earliest communications and Tilton was as to alleged gift for Tilton to pay off a mortgage on his household there was a mortgage on it and if that was removed it seemed to make over his wife I said that whatever gift kind was made to go to her understood the amount of the $7 000 He spoke to me often and I asked him I say this had been done [illegible] remember it distinctly that it for Bessie Turner's education [illegible] 187 [illegible] It was in the summer and Tilton had been paying on many small Tilton had been paying on many small bills and he was one of which would help [illegible] Tilton's gifts after Tilton before any of Tilton's [illegible] to court

After other admonitions from the court to the gallery to preserve order, Mr Evarts said I wish to correct a mistake in the report which makes him ascribe some of the applause to his friend Tilton, whereas he did justly said Fullerton

Mr Evarts explained the directions of the court to Beecher's counsel as to the matter but which house on evening. It was suggested by counsel that the presence of a judge was not necessary and the witness left out

Witness continued I had another interview with Mrs Tilton at her house which as I believed from what happened she sent for me

Mr Beecher reported to his wife an

HER TREASURE

BY MARY H. DOLOE

The grim old house wears a grimmer look
As the midnight wonder why
Not "man" and "house" are always grim
Or they pass as ever by

Sixty years for wealth her home apart
Yet no joy there may town
For never a bolder, darker heart
More sure than he, still frowns

No beggar a scene I thus came to her
No friend's form a stress
No little one's laugh floats playing near
Turmoil's cheer for Age's curse

The neighbors had combined to bear that she
Drew over a gentle breath
When the heart of the undertaker cried
Crew cold at the touch of death

They know that earth, when they broke the door
Held nothing of value—no
When they pressed to the casket's side to wrest
And they found but an empty bed

An inch-thick key with an open lid—
Wide, for to all at sea,
Little woman dead—Hood's arm-chair
With the treasure hidden far!

Second Testament,
And mark on how she spread page
Down a black of
Years that are shod with age.

[illegible] more with more tender step
Than ever bend [illegible]
Fond [illegible] where her gaze is fixed—
[illegible] Daniel's lair.

Although for the last intent,

LOTTIE'S BUNDLE.

It was the first day of April of course but it was also the first day of April that Willie Wilkinson ever [illegible] over the secret of my story [illegible] I believe [illegible] other [illegible] package of goods or [illegible] Little Lottie and Willie [illegible] out of the corner [illegible] the [illegible] and the country around [illegible] There was [illegible] the [illegible] Dr. [illegible] Herbert [illegible] playing near [illegible] for Mrs. Conrad

Mr. Herbert Gilmore was quite well [illegible] of all the various excesses of Miss Lottie and was all ready to declare [illegible] a cure only the glossy brown hair, of blue eyes, exquisite complexion and graceful figure of that young lady. He knew that the pretty ornaments in the parlor were the work of Lottie's little white hands that the flowers on the stand were Lottie's [illegible] and the light tea biscuit were [illegible]

You guess they were lovers. Well so they were but as the course of true love never did run smooth there was a great rock ahead in the channel of their love and that rock was named Martin Gilmore Martin Gilmore was as tough an old bachelor as ever had a beard reared as ever shaved in a romance and moreover uncle to the handsome young Herbert who had so long studied Lottie Wilkinson's blue eyes and both fingers.

Mrs. Wilkinson had been a kind friend to the young man whose only home was his uncle's gloomy house and when the love story was confided to her gave a willing consent to her daughter's betrothal with one whom she believed to be honorable and true a sincere Christian and worthy of her confidence. The question of money never occurred to her and her amazement was unfeigned when she found Martin Gilmore resolutely opposed to the match on the ground of the bride-elect's want of fortune.

Herbert at once asserted his right to choose for himself. He was a young lawyer with a fair practice, without sufficient means to warrant matrimony at present, but hopeful and industrious, willing to wait for his home until he earned it, and by no means waiting for his uncle's fortune to fall to him. In the Spring time of which I am writing Herbert was a party in a lawsuit, of which it must write more, and there was some hope that the little home over which Lottie was to preside might be nearer than was at first anticipated.

April was a week old, when, one evening Herbert came into Mrs. Wilkinson's pleasant little parlor, evidently in a state of some excitement. Lottie was alone, sewing, (ah ye romantic) a patch on Tom's jacket.

Lottie, put down that sewing, do, and hear my news."

Such sympathising blue eyes are not always raised for news

"I've had a windfall."

What is it Bert?

"I never would tell you about this lawsuit before, Lottie because I did not consider my chance worth a pin but it is different now, and I want to tell you about it."

I am listening Bert."

Well, there were two brothers and one sister my Uncle Martin Uncle Godfrey and Aunt Elizabeth years ago Uncle Martin and Uncle Godfrey accumulated large fortunes but father was too liberal and open hearted to have much and never was a rich man. Some two years before he died Aunt Elizabeth married a man as poor as herself but good and true
